Biography

My research interest starts with shrinkage estimation for linear and partially linear models in the context of low and high dimensional case. In recent years, I have been working on big data and statistical machine learning techniques with theory and applications. I am also professionally working coding my studies to R language with publishing in CRAN. Throughout my academic career, I have published a number papers in well-known statistical journals, that have high impact factor, as well as book chapters in well-known publishers. I have been in Canada during my doctorate and post doctorate studies. I presented my studies in the Fields Institute, University of Toronto (as invited speaker) and The University of British Columbia.
